

Q71. Which of the following is a method of phishing?

- a) A virus-infected computer is controlled from the outside via a network such as the Internet.
- b) Personal information such as the IP address and Web browsing history of computer users is secretly collected and sent to the outside.
- c) Someone sends e-mails to entice the recipients and to have them access fake Web sites that appear to be sites of actually existing companies etc. and steals personal information.
- d) When there is a part that directly displays what has been entered on a Web page, a malicious script is embedded within the page, causing damage to the user and the server.