

Q49. A systems design is represented using several diagrams. When a system analyst wants to confirm the design information such as the relationships among functions and the interface among modules in a hierarchical manner, which of the following is the most appropriate diagram that should be inspected by the analyst?

- | | |
|-----------------------------|--------------------------------|
| a) Data flow diagram | b) Entity-relationship diagram |
| c) State transition diagram | d) Structured chart |