Q57. From multiple types of slips, data in items specified for each type is inputted. Which of the following is the appropriate initial process to be executed in the program to confirm that all the required data is inputted?

a) A comparison is made between the number of items specified for each slip type and the number of items inputted.

b) Inputted data is checked against master files to confirm that the contents of inputted items are correct.

c) It is confirmed that the contents of inputted items are in agreement with the data formats specified for the slip type.

d) The slip type code is used to inspect the data formats of inputted items.